About our firm

The first non-governmental agency of intellectual property in the Soviet Union

At the end of the 80s of the last century a group of experts - people from the system of the USSR State Committee for Inventions and Discoveries created the first non-governmental agency of intellectual property INTELS. After registration as a legal entity on 21st of September, 1988, INTELS specialized in a wide range of services. In addition to the protection of trademarks, inventions and industrial designs, the staff was engaged in implementation of scientific and technological developments, creation of trademarks and corporate identity, advertising campaigns.

№1, not in words but in deeds

The first theatrical presentations of production of Soviet enterprises, the first advertising on public transport, identity of the President of the USSR and The Moscow mayor's office identity, the original medical equipment - all that was conceived and implemented by INTELS. From the first days INTELS promotes the need and importance of a civilized approach to intellectual property in the market conditions, and in the beginning of 90s organized and held a number of conferences on intellectual property for the representatives of the starting business.

Tight specialization has helped us to become experts in our work

Transition toward a market economy and an increase in demand for patent and trademark attorneys resulted in focusing the field of professional interest of INTELS agency on activities in the field of legal protection of intellectual property. Tight specialization contributed opportunity to concentrate on developing and improving the professional and organizational level. After the collapse of the USSR international network INTELS was established in the sovereign republic to provide professional services to the needs of not only national but also international clients who appreciate the professionalism of our specialists.
